Will Gain Three Pounds Per Day If Fed From Self Feeder

The quickest way to produce a 1900 lb. steer is to keep him on feed that will enable him to make maximum gains every day without a let-up. During the months of May, June and July, steers on the range gain 2½ to 3½ lbs. per day. These gains, which are equivalent to maximum feed-lot gains, are made when the grass is green and high in nutritive value. When the grass starts to cure in August its nutritive value declines rapidly and there is a corresponding rapid decrease in daily gains. As a result, daily gains in September and October average less than a pound a day and if the steer remains on grass he is not approaching the 1900 lb. goal as quickly as he might be.

There are several feeding methods that can be used to maintain high daily gains after the grass cures. Supplemental grain may be fed on pasture, using a self-feeder after the steers become accustomed to the grain. Fed in this manner they will gain over 3 lbs. per day. Moving the steers from cured native grass to green cover crop or aftermath on irrigated land will also assure the continuation of high daily gains. Field corn, if grazed by steers during the fall months will maintain daily gains at the same average.

In the early winter when weather and feed conditions require, the steers can be put into the feed-lot where they will continue to gain at a high rate, and thus reach the 1900 lb. weight at a much younger age than would be the case if they were left on the range until late fall. In view of the urgent demand for beef it appears that the adoption of feeding practices along the lines of those mentioned above would be in order.

Calculate Capacity Circular Bins—Snow Fencing Useable

Many farmers are building temporary circular bins out in the open, using either bundles of wheat or wire fencing or snow fencing for a wall. Some want to know how to calculate how much wheat such circular bins will hold.

Snow fencing, for instance, comes in 100 feet rolls and is 4 feet high. Two feet is required for an overlap leaving a circle 98 feet in circumference.

First find the diameter. Multiply 98.7 and divide by 22. This gives us 31.2 feet diameter. Now multiply the diameter by itself, then by 4 for the height of the bin, and then by the constant figure of 61, and strike off the last two whole numbers of the product. Like this:

31.2x31.2x4x61 equals 237519, making 2375 bushels contained in the bin to the top of the fence.

Now for the cone of wheat on top of the bin. Multiply the diameter by itself and then by itself again, then by the figure 45, and strike off the last three whole numbers. Like this: 31.2x31.2x31.2x45 equals 1366709, making 1366 bushels contained in the cone. The total contents of the bin when brim full, and including the cone on the top, will be 3,741 measured bushels of wheat at 60 pounds to the bushel.

This formula can be used for any size circular bin and it is correct to a half of 1 per cent. Remember the two constant figures—61 for the base of the bin and 45 for the cone. (These constants can only be used for calculating circular bins, not for square bins.)

SHOWER HELD FOR BRIDE

A surprise miscellaneous shower in honor of Mrs Ben Mitchell (Dorita Owen Whelan) was held in the School Hall Wednesday evening, October 28th. About fifty guests were present. A few game were played and the Misses Olga and Emely Zawasky rendered two duets. Later the bride was presented with many lovely, useful gifts.

The presentation was made by two small girls, Patsy Gallagher and Evelyn Seeger who drew in a wagon on top of which was a decorated house of happiness filled with gift.

The bride in a few well chosen words expressed her thanks to the ladies. A dainty lunch was served after which hands were joined around the bride while they sang "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow".

The Ladies' Card Club met Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Nicholson. Honors were shared by Mrs. Nicholson and Mrs. Gallagher.

The Club will meet at the home of Mrs. C. Seeger next week.

Mr. Geo. Aitken is a Calgary business visitor this week.

Miss Edler Intermediate teacher attended the Hanna Convention this week.

DEPARTMEN OF NATIONAL REVENUE

Ottawa — Interviewed by representatives of the Federation of Agriculture and the Farm Press, the Hon. Colin Gibson, Minister of National Revenue stated that while farm businesses, like all other businesses were required by law to make the first payment on their 1942 Income Tax on Oct. 15th, his department was fully aware of the special difficulties farmers would face, and had been instructed to give them some leeway and possible assistance.

Mr. Gibson explained that the lowering of the Income Tax phase to $600 for single men and $1200 for married men, combined with better prices and greater production, would bring a large number of farmers into the Income Tax paying group, who had not been taxable in past years. In view of this said the Minister, the Commissioner of Income Tax was working with farmers' representatives to simplify farm Income Tax forms and procedure, to make recommendations which would as far as possible recognize the seasonal nature of farm income and expenses, and the difference between the farm and the city business.

The result of this examination of the subject would be fully publicized, Mr. Gibson said, and then he would call on farmers for the same kind of patriotic co-operation they had shown in stepping up food production. In the meantime he urged every farm operator who had not kept some sort of regular accounts, to start now and jot down every 1942 farm receipt and expense they could remember and to keep a careful record of them from now on.

Sharing With England

IN RECENT MONTHS Canadians have begun to experience many of the difficulties caused by the shortage of food and other items important to our way of living. Rationing so far as not been used for many commodities, but in spite of this, the standard of living in most Canadian homes has changed in the past months. These changes have caused some inconvenience, but no real hardship, and for the most part have been cheerfully accepted. We are still able to live comfortably, and even though our purchasing is curtailed we can sit down to bountiful meals and we have fuel, warm clothing and other things essential to health and comfort. Most of us believe that there is still much we could give up, should the necessity arise.

British People Remain Fit

It would be well for us here to remember at all times that many of the shortages we encounter are due to shipment of material to England. Others are due to the fact that ships normally used to bring imported commodities to Canada, are now transporting materials of war. In England, the people are commencing the fourth year of the war. That they are physically fit, and able to carry on their gigantic undertakings is in great measure because of the efficiency and imagination of the Food Minister, Lord Woolton, and his staff. It is said that no uneasy stomachs will soon set a man grumbling, and there are few people in England who are not thankful for the way in which their national larder has been stocked and shared. In 1939 England imported over fifty per cent. of her food, some of it from countries now occupied by the Axis, yet by a tremendous re-organization of supply and distribution it has been possible to keep the British people adequately fed during the war years.

Praise For Food Ministry

In a publication issued recently by the British Ministry of Information it was stated that this has been accomplished through the far-sighted policy and organization of the British Ministry of Food, and the generous help of the Dominions and the United States, who have made their own sacrifices to send food to Britain. It further states that because of this the people of England will turn to the offensive "fighting fit". When we consider what the shipment of essential materials from here mean to the people of Britain, we can be proud that we can share with them in the sacrifices necessary to the winning of the war.

How to feed the war worker has become an important question in thousands of Canadian homes. Our first suggestion is going to be something you may feel that you, personally, can do nothing about. But don't dismiss it on that account. You alone may feel helpless. But you and your friends, and your friends' friends are public opinion; which can still do plenty. So the first suggestion is that all war workers in a good sized plant, whatever that is. Surveys conducted by "Nutrition Services" show that industrial workers meals served by a plant-operated cafeteria on a no profit basis are far better than those served by concession cafeterias. Agitation by a worker's committee might rectify the situation if it's wrong in your plant. And another thing, for those very necessary between meal snacks, the best and most telling stimulants are milk, fruit, juices, (and that includes tomato juice) or cocoa—no soft drinks. It is inconceivable that a general demand for milk or fruit juices, in place of soft drinks, would be ignored. Now if your plant isn't one of the ideal ones—and some of them are, you know—some plants serve the sort of meals neither simply didn't know enough to produce; but if your isn't one of them you'll have to fall back on the lunch box.

Here are some rules that will make that lunch box meal a proper one:

1. See that it contains these three ingredients—protein, a vegetable (not potato) or fruit and milk won't give you any trouble. And neither will protein if you remember that our best sources of protein are—meat, fish, eggs, cheese and dried vegetables (like beans).
2. A thermos flask of hot soup or cocoa may just hit the spot. This is purely a matter of taste. The necessity of one hot hit has been shown in recent experiments to be just another superstition. But if your war worker likes one, it obeys rule two, which is palatability.
3. Arrange for the lunch box meal to be as fresh as possible. Don't make it up the night before. And do wrap everything carefully in wax paper to prevent drying.

Another tip—be sure your sandwich fillings are moist but not wet. Avoid soggy sandwiches on the one hand and dry ones on the other. Use whole wheat bread.

YUGOSLAVIA'S ARMY

Hither, so it is reported, is determined to put a stop to the operations of Yugoslavia's guerrilla armies. In view of the fact that such resistance is said to be tying up no fewer than 375,000 Germans, Italians, Bulgarians and Hungarians who are badly needed elsewhere, his resolve may be easily understood.

LONG VOYAGE

A New York newspaper recalls that 100 years ago the corvette, St. Louis, arrived at Norfolk after a voyage lasting three years and 79 days, sailing 75,000 geographical miles. The modern meaning of a corvette is very different, but a corvette was originally a small sailing ship without a quarter-deck.

The Individual Citizen's Army

A Weekly Column About This Army That Is In Our Canadian Army.
By Alma Maurice Irwin

Where is that man who referred to me and other writers who look things in the face as "you alarmists"? I'd like to take him on a little motor trip—to the Gaspé Peninsula!

That is to say I'd like to take him for that trip but for one thing—it would be a shame to waste gasoline on him. And motor trips are out—except for the nimbles with their heads buried in the sand who still run their cars, "just for a little jaunt on Sundays."

"A little jaunt on Sundays?" We are fighting a people who would shoot them for that. So, just because we are not a people who shoot amateur traitors, they blithely disregard signs that even the dullest common man can read, squander life-saving gasoline, wear out badly needed rubber and complacently increase the spread of the only portion of their anatomy ever likely to be impaled upon a German or Japanese bayonet.

Some of them, on the long, strategic road that follows the St. Lawrence even drive with their headlights full on after dark.

And all this, mind you, after the news has been released that enemy submarines have been active in the Gulf of St. Lawrence!

A black-out has been ordered on the banks of the River St. Lawrence and extending five miles inward.

This has not been done for fun, it has been done because lights on shore enable a navigator to make his way to the point he desires to reach and equally because lights on the shore silhouette any vessel—even a little fishing boat—between the shore and an enemy raider.

So you see this has not been done for fun. It has been ordered because Canada, whether we like to admit it or not, is in the war zone. It has been ordered because lives have been lost on the broad bosom of the mighty waterway, the banks of which Lady Bessborough once described as "arms that reach out to welcome visitors to Canada." There are some visitors Canada does not welcome—hence the need for a black-out.

Shortly after the black-out was ordered, indignant complaints reached the authorities that it was not complete. The answer to this was fairly simple. Many of the farmers living in the country surrounding the river do not read the newspapers, do not listen to radio and did not understand how close the war has come to Canada's shores. They understand now because the authorities quickly devised a plan for notifying every villager, every farmer, of the black-out order and of the reasons for it and the necessity for its observance.

The foregoing paragraph, however, grant no absolution to the motorists who drove along the highway with their headlights on, headlights that, everytime the road rounded a cape pointed out like twin searchlights across the black waters of the gulf. These were just careless—if so criminal a disregard for the lives of Canadians aloft for the protection of Canada can be called careless—motorists who thought more of their own safety and more of the silly "necessity" for speed that would not permit them to dim their lights and proceed at a pace calculated not only to assist the war effort by maintaining the darkness but also to assist it by conserving tires and gasoline.

And it is not only in the black-out areas that such "careless" motorists mar the otherwise bright pages that Canada is writing in the history of these awful war years.

On the Sunday preceding Thanksgiving Day and on Thanksgiving Day itself, you saw for yourself streams of private automobiles that choked the highways surrounding the larger cities. What you thought about it I can guess. What I thought about it, no newspaper can print.

Apparently such selfishness is something that only public opinion applied privately can remedy.

This column, the forty-second, that has appeared in these pages, brings to an end the series known as The Individual Citizen's Army. It comes to an end because this individual citizen no longer will have the time to write a column a week. As a matter of fact, under King's Regulations and Orders governing the Canadian Army, he will not have permission to write for publication, because this "old sweat" puts on the uniform again with "Canada" on his shoulders to enable a younger man, who is fit, to move on to one of the fronts on which we all are sure the Canadian Army will soon again victoriously take up the torch thrown to it by falling hands a quarter of a century ago.

Good luck, Alan! You have done a good job for Canada with your column, "The Individual Citizen's Army." You have told us what we needed to know—it has been quite a task for you and we all appreciated your writings. Sorry you can't keep it up but we're doubly proud that you'll wear the uniform again. May all good fortune go with you—you're a real citizen—Editor.

DEPLORING RUMORS

George W. Spinney, in deploring the rumors that are spread to harm Canada's war effort and urging that they be promptly scotched, defines rumors as usually being nothing more than somebody with big ears listening to somebody with a big mouth. Those are unflattering categories in which no intelligent or loyal person wishes to be included. The point is obvious.

The Grand Duchess Marie, a cousin of the late Czar Nicholas II. of Russia, declares that in their present stand the Russian people "are again giving a sublime example of the same spirit of sacrifice which they displayed throughout history, when repelling foreign invaders—the Teutonic Knights, the Tartar hordes, the Turks, the Poles, the Swedes, the Grand Army of Napoleon." Russia, she says, has never surrendered and "will not surrender now."

— BY —
MICHAEL TRENT

CHAPTER III.

Static quiet came between them, and Anne Lowry felt within herself the nerve-taut desperation Erich Kruger once again had been. The lonely road the dark forest it bisected, seemed suddenly a hostile spot. The night might hide watching eyes.

"Anne, I beg you—help me," he said. "I am a stranger here, no man for the mountains and the forest. I was ever your friend." He broke off, leaned so close his dark unshaven face was inches from hers. "I do not like to beg a favor, nor say that you are obligated to me."

He broke off and this time was silent, letting the implication play its suggestion in the mind of Anne Lowry. He was reminding her of a debt, one he perhaps had never meant to ask repaid, and it was such an enormous debt that payment should be forthcoming without demand. Anne had never forgotten. It had been more than three years ago, when her father lay ill, dying of fever, and all hope had been gone. And then Erich Kruger came. Anne remembered how he had brushed aside the inept doctor who could do nothing against the unknown fever.

"Erich had said, 'There is one man who can save his life. My father,'"

"And Anne would never forget that unauthorized flight, that mercy flight to Venezuela, nor how, at the night's end Doctor Kruger had found a faint spark of life and fanned it with infinite patience and singular skill until Drew Lowry lived."

"All that Erich Kruger now recalled, reminding Anne that there was a debt—a debt that now could be paid."

"Anne said, 'How can I help you, Erich?' And she saw how that made him relax. He thrust the gun into the pocket of the rough denim jacket he wore."

"You have a home near by?" he asked.

"I live at the hotel, at Halfway House. Father and I operate it, you see."

"A hotel?" He was thinking about. "It might do. I could be a guest. They would not look for me as a guest—except for my clothes. Perhaps you could get me some suitable attire. Anne, I would not be long with you. Once the hue and cry has died down, I shall make my way to Mexico. There I will find friends who will help me get back home, to South America, where I can join my father and be safe. I want only to be safe, Anne." His voice broke, recovered quickly. "I have gone through so much, suffered so greatly."

A question loomed giganticly in Anne's mind. What great trouble was he in? Why was he hunted? Had he committed some ugly crime? He could not bring himself to ask, seeing how desperate he was, and he did not mean to tell her.

"Did you know what to do, Erich?" she said. "Did you know what to do, Erich?" she said. "Did you know what to do, Erich?" she said.

"He would be safe, for as long as he thinks you should stay."

"She straightened around to drive on. The mountain road seemed lonelier and more hostile than ever before. She drove fast, not seeing the station wagon's springs on the rough road. Erich must have found some way to get away from her. Then seeing only her he sheepishly grinned."

"Halfway House is just ahead," she told him. "The guests do not start coming until tomorrow. I imagine everyone will be abed by now, but I'll go on ahead and see. It will be best if the help does not see you in those clothes. Wait here, Erich, and I'll appear in the doorway when you will know it is safe to come."

"That is good, Anne," he said. "I am grateful to you."

"He opened the door and got out into the darkness. He started to close the door then held it. 'You are holding the gun. Then seeing only her he sheepishly grinned.'"

"There is no one more at the hotel than I," he said. "I am alone."

"No telephone. I could not tell you if I wished."

"No," he said. "His eyes, sunken and feverishly bright, appraised her. 'No, you would not give me up to police.'"

"There is not a policeman within miles and miles. There were only Forest Rangers over at Squaw Creek, there was—Steve Hayes."

"An idea came to him," Erich said. "An idea, yes, but I admit it. I had forgotten the Forest Rangers. They watch out for strangers. You will have to be very careful, Erich."

He needed, he said, "I will watch for the signal."

"Anne put the car into gear again and drove on to Halfway House. She parked the station wagon in the drive, then crossed the front verandah and entered the lobby, closing the door behind her. Her father was slouched in an armchair by the radio, which was bringing in a Hollywood show and smoking his pipe."

"Dad, are the others gone to their rooms?" she whispered.

"Why, yes, Bailey was last to go. She was here with me until half an hour ago. He eyed her anxiously. 'Hello! Something's up. What is it?'"

"Prepare yourself for a shock, Drew Lowry," Anne said, forcing her voice gay. "I have an old friend out here. You'd never guess who. It's Erich Kruger!"

He stared unbelievably. "Erich Kruger here? Oh no. Erich's thousands of miles from here, Anne," he said. A shadowy look darkened his pale thin face. "I know that for certain, Anne. You see, I kept it from you but Erich Kruger—"

"Erich Kruger," said a gruff voice from the doorway. "Is here. He hopes he is welcome."

Anne whirled and saw that he had silently opened the door and had listened. He had followed her to the hotel—not trusting her. Lamplight was bright on his face, and now she saw how he had changed. He no longer was the youthful and carefree airline pilot; something besides time had hardened his face, thinned out his mouth, put a metallic brightness in his eyes. He closed the door behind him, came slowly into the big, bare-timbered room, a square hall and a not tall man in torn and soiled denim pants and jacket and heavy-duty shoes. He smiled, but it was a mechanical smile.

"Or am I not welcome, my old friend?" he asked. "If that is so, I shall go my way."

"No, no!" Drew Lowry exclaimed. He rose and moved to Erich, holding out his hand. "I could never turn you away, Erich. What is mine, is yours."

"The police—"

"We will not speak of that at once, Erich."

"Then I will say how good it is to see you again. The sight of an old friend can be as satisfying as the sight of a father—almost as pleasant as seeing a sweetheart." Erich put his arm about Drew Lowry's shoulders. "You look better than three years ago, Herr Lowry. And the fraulein is so much prettier."

His use of the German words made Drew Lowry look anxiously about. He said, "Sit in that chair by the radio, Erich. It is away from the windows."

"Is it possible someone could see me in here?"

"Possible but not probable," Drew Lowry said. "Anne, switch off some of the lights. . . . It will be cozy."

Anne obeyed, and as she moved back from the light switch she heard Erich's insistent query: "Who could see? There are neighbors?"

The older man shot Anne a meaningful glance, then placidly questioned Erich. "There was a policeman—a forest ranger, to be exact—here today looking about. He asked questions about how many people were here at Halfway House. I think it possible he knew you were somewhere in the vicinity and might have come to see."

Erich nodded jerkily. "It is possible," he said dully. "I had to go to borrow a car. After I crossed the Canadian border, I abandoned it close to the town where I met Anne. That was early this morning, so they would know that I am somewhere close."

He lifted his hands in a pitiful pleading gesture. "If you could know what torment I have suffered, you would understand why I must not be caught. Herr Lowry—"

One hand extended to Drew Lowry, then the other to Anne. "Fraulein—Try to imagine yourself in my place. Think what it means to be hunted like an animal."

Unnoticed, the radio program had given way to an eleven o'clock news broadcast. As Erich spoke, the newscaster's voice filled the room. The word had a jolting impact.

"Canadian authorities announce that the German aviator who early yesterday made a daring escape from an Alberta Province prison camp is still at large. It is thought that the man has succeeded in reaching the United States, where police and F.B.I. agents are hunting."

Drew Lowry went and switched off the radio. The sudden quiet seemed explosive. Anne saw a chalky whiteness on Erich's face, and she did not guess until this moment, although that morning she had heard of a news broadcast telling of the escaped prisoner, that Erich Kruger was that sort of a hunted man.

Squaw Creek Ranger Station stood in a forest clearing between the highway and the turbulent creek, a neat row of silver-gray buildings including the administration building, a machine shop, a warehouse, and three houses. It was marked by a big sign bearing the Forest Service pine-tree emblem.

At eleven o'clock, Steve Hayes went into the dispatcher's room in the administration building for weather reports. The reports were monotonously the same: wind, no rain, light frosty—good weather for timber fires. There was a fire over in the next district, and the radio operator, Chic Boucher, held over a report on it. The fire was being held; it was nothing to worry about. The dispatcher removed the phones from his ears.

"Sheriff Hardy phoned a couple of minutes ago, Steve," he said. "He wants us to keep our eyes open for strangers. He thinks that escaped German aviator is wandering about Squaw Creek territory."

Steve Hayes nodded. "I've been keeping my eyes open, and if he's here we'll get him sooner or later," he said. He looked suddenly troubled. "The sooner, the better. I hate to have a desperate mug like that loose in my district—with the country dry like this. Given time, hunted men always get the same ideas in the timber—an incendiary fire to throw off pursuit. Then there's the devil to pay."

SMILE AWHILE

"Your husband is a martyr to dyspepsia, I believe."

"Not exactly," replied the long-suffering wife. "He's got dyspepsia all right, but I'm the martyr."

Teacher: "With what weapon did Samson slay the thousand Philistines, Tommy?"

Tommy: "With the axe of the Apostles."

Suitor: "Sir, I would like to marry your daughter."

Father: "Young man, do you drink?"

Suitor: "Thanks, but let's get this other matter settled first."

The newly-married couple were just leaving the registrar's office when the wife remembered she had registered her age as a year older than she actually was.

"Och, never mind," replied her husband, "ye'll get the auld age pension a year sooner."

Dad: "Well, what kind of grades did you make in your finals?"

Son: "All right in everything but one study, and in that I am like Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln."

Dad: "Why, how's that?"

Son: "I went down in history."

Chairman of the Dance Committee: "Can't you stretch the music a little just a dance or two more?"

Orchestra Leader: "Sorry, this isn't a rubber band!"

CANADA'S HOUSEHOLDERS

Keep in line with timely economy.

Crown Brand Syrup in addition to its other uses, is being so generally used to supplement sugar, that the demand has increased tremendously — so that sometimes your grocer may not be able to supply you. But you'll understand why.

A great deal more "Crown Brand" is being produced this year but it cannot be expected to meet a demand resulting from a war shortage of millions of pounds of sugar.

The supply of Crown Brand Syrup, like other things, must be shared. Don't hoard—buy normally. With the help of your grocer, every effort is being made to keep you supplied with this delicious syrup.

Central Airport

May Be Built In The Heart Of London After The War

A great airport, surrounded by a spacious War Memorial park, may be built in the heart of London as part of the post-war reconstruction scheme. Already the blitzed areas—half-prepared by Hitler—are being examined by government surveyors with a view to their development in this way. When peace comes it will be found that the importance of air transport has multiplied many times over during the years of war. It is felt, therefore, that a central airport must have a prior claim in any reconstruction plans for London.

Bumping Can Be Avoided Easy, now! If you often crash into people on the dance floor, you're probably not sure of your dance posture or your steps.

You can easily learn the steps from diagrams. As for posture and smooth leading, why not take a few of the tips other men follow? For instance—

In holding your partner, be as comfortable as possible; keep her right arm no higher than her shoulder, and keep her a little above the waist. She'll follow better, make it easier for you.

Get your body under control as you dance. See that your upper body is directly over your hips—your weight over the balls of your feet. Then you can stop on a dime!

But, most important of all, be in a relaxed state of mind—possible only if you know the steps by heart!

You can learn any popular dance in one evening. Our 32-page booklet has diagrams and clear instructions for Conga, rumba, tango, fox-trot, Westchester, waltz, Sambo, Peabody and shag. Includes basic steps and variations. Gives tips on leading, following.

Send 1c in coins for your copy of "How to Do the Newest Dance Steps and Variations" to Home Service Dept., Winnipeg Newspaper Union, 170 McDermott Ave., E., Winnipeg, Man. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

● Not even a teaspoonful of sugar in this new Swans Down Cake. And it is delightfully light and fine in texture—delicious in flavor. Try it!

BUT BE SURE TO USE SWANS DOWN

In all sugarless baking you need the extra lightness and deliciousness that Swans Down gives to cakes. This flour is specially made for cake-baking from selected parts of a special kind of soft wheat, milled and sifted through silk until it is 27 times as fine as ordinary flour. Buy and try Swans Down today.

Sugarless Cake

3/4 cup sifted Swans Down Cake Flour
2 1/2 teaspoons Calumet Baking Powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup butter
2 teaspoons grated orange rind
1 cup light cream
2 eggs unbeaten
1/2 cup milk
1/2 teaspoon vanilla

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift together three times. Cream butter and sugar, add eggs, one at a time, gradually, beating well after each addition. Add 1/4 of flour and beat well. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each. Add remaining flour a part at a time, alternately with milk, beating very well after each addition. Add vanilla. Bake in two greased 8-inch layer pans in moderate oven (375°F) 30 minutes. Put layers together with your favorite jam.

Farmers and the Victory Loan
War loan canvassers will be hard at work again on October 10. The minimum objective for Canada's third victory loan is 750 million dollars. The finance minister, whose difficult task is to find the money to pay the country's war bills, states that the loan must be well oversubscribed.

Many plans are being laid to insure success of the loan. One of these is of particular interest to farmers. It is the "victory ticket method." The victory ticket is simply an order authorizing the buyers of any farm product, which has a ready cash market, to withhold a part of the proceeds from produce delivered immediately or in the future to pay for a war bond or regular war savings certificate purchases. When remitted to provincial headquarters of the National War Finance Committee, securities equivalent in value to the proceeds received will be sent to the farmer.

Elevator companies, packing companies, produce dealers, livestock commission firms, mercantile operators, local merchants, etc., will all be made thoroughly familiar with the plan and will be supplied with the necessary forms.

Thousands of farmers have been doing a superb job in producing these food commodities urgently needed for war. These same farmers want to do more. They are anxious to support the victory loans. It has, however, been impossible for many to buy war bonds or savings certificates for the reason that, at the time of the campaign, they just have not had the ready cash. This new plan will be welcomed by farmers. They will see in it an opportunity to assist just that much more in winning the war.

NOTHING MATTERS NOW BUT VICTORY!

To The Editor,
Chinook Advance,
Chinook, Alta.

Dear Madam,
3rd Victory Loan Campaign

There seems to be rumour going the rounds of this village that Mr. Warren and I are being paid a commission of $2 per $100 of Victory Bonds sold. Let me at once stamp this rumour as enemy propaganda. The commission directly accruing to this district is 1/8 of 1 per cent on all Victory Loan Sales here.

Suffice it is to say there is a very direct sense of duty enmeshed upon all citizens at this time. That duty is to buy War Bonds to the utmost of our ability. So far this district has purchased $450 worth of bonds from your canvassers. This is not a high tribute to those boys who have left all to fight our battles.

A few days are left in which to purchase. You will all be canvassed this coming week, don't you do your utmost to buy.

Co-operat'n Needed to Speed Up Return of New Books

Mailing of notices to 25,000 Alberta car owners they have been placed in category "AA" under the gasoline rationing system has commenced, W. J. Dick, regional oil controller with headquarters in Edmonton, said Wednesday.

These owners are asked to turn in their old "A" ration books immediately so that new ones may be forwarded to them.

"We would like to have their co-operation in returning the old coupons as quickly as possible," said Mr. Dick. "The new books will be sent out the same day the old ones are returned."

Under the new order effective Oct. 1, car owners, who are placed in category "AA", which is for cars that are in a non-essential classification, are entitled to 16 coupons for gasoline for the six months' period ending March 31, next.

If there are less than 16 coupons in the old books the car owner will receive in the new books only the number that were turned in, said the controller.

Mr. Dick said it was expected distribution of all notices to those placed in category "AA" will be completed within two or three days.

"Now WE hold a Mortgage on Canada Ma!"

"Sure we're working harder than ever—but that never hurt anybody. We're working longer hours and putting our money away in Victory Bonds. Now we'll be paid interest instead of paying it.

"When peace comes we'll have money saved to buy new equipment for our farm—might even put up a new barn—maybe take a holiday!

"Meanwhile, we can't think of any safer or better place to invest our money than in bonds backed by our country. And we can't think of any better purpose than helping our fighting boys get the jump on the enemy. When we read about our lads bombing Germany, we can think that maybe we raised one of those bombs on our own farm.

"So that's our plan from now until peace comes. We will work to save and lend. We'll have it to spend later. And we can look forward to getting that new tractor and that fine new automobile we're saving for now."

"We'll be laying up for ourselves the best of all investments—VICTORY BONDS—backed by all the resources of the Dominion of Canada: they yield a fair rate of interest; we can borrow against them; and they are readily saleable when we need cash!
